DIRECTOR'S NOTE

This past May, with the end of the '20-'21 academic year upon us, some members of the Music Theatre faculty at Northwestern University thought it would be a good thing if we could get some live performance happening again over the summer. The leaders within the Wirtz Center and the School of Communication agreed - and so, here we are.

Those Music Theatre faculty - Ryan Nelson, Kelli Nichol McHugh and myself - put this program together as a way of bringing members of our community together. It is centered on musicals in production that were closed, or interrupted, or put on 'pause' as a result of the Covid-19 pandemic.

All of us - students and faculty alike - are most excited by what is coming up, the new works, new voices - new ideas - that have been biding their time, waiting for the signal that theatres can re-open. Waiting for the opportunity to sing, share, succeed, fail, try again, make mistakes, make history, create this new world that we are all waking up to. Thank you for joining us now, and in the future.
